THE REPUBLIC.

The Certificate System, and Buttering year Priends.

From a Summary of "Minor Morals," in "Blackwood" for Jeme.

It is a singular circumstance, considering that there never does occur an instance of a vacancy in a post or situation, be it political, literary, professional, or accientific, but there appears a host of candidates, each armed with certificates to shownot that he is eminent, for that is a matter of course, but that he is pre-eminent, and that nature has evidently designed him for that especial office. Not long ago we had occasion, in reference to a matter of this kind, to peruse the testimonials of no less than sixteen candidates, and we really were petrificed at the amount of dornamt and suppressed talent which the land contained. One candidate in particular issued about six sets of certificates, with the appetissing promises of more; and we were really sorry when he had exhausted his stores of printed panegyrie, for we founds that they made admirable matches, and were in request in the lower region for the purpose of singeing frowls. We doubt whether the Dalai Lama had a greater number of implicit worshippers. At least a hundred and twenty gentlemen, of various shades of obscurity, with all the capital letters in the alphabet appended to their names, had written letters to their friends, or to those to whom the patronage was entrusted in terms that an historian would blush to apply to the admirable Crichton. Never was there such a fellow as that. Of all the race of Adam, alive or dead, he was the only one competent to do justice to the subject. No draw-well or Artessian horing could equal him in prefinding.

The Great Eastern Mail, from Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, &c., and Buffalo, and philadelphia to the subject. No draw-well or Artessian horing could equal him in prefinding the subject. The draw well and ph fellow as that. Of all the race of Adam, alive or dead, he was the only one competent to do justice to the subject. No draw-well or Artesian boring could equal him in profundity. He had a genius that carried him on its soaring pinions beyond the limits of the stars. Some worthy attestors averred that the chief joy of their lives had been the privilege of his conversation—and very disinterested persons they appeared to be, since his election must necessarily remove the darling planet from their sphere. Others pledged their the Great Eastern and Great Western Mails are planet from their sphere. Others pledged their the Great Eastern and Great Western Mails are planet from their sphere. testors averred that the chief joy of their lives had been the privilege of his conversation—and very disinterested persons they appeared to be, since his election must necessarily remove the darling planet from their sphere. Others pledged their reputation—no very great stake, after all—that he would do what never man did before, and pathetically entreated the electors not to lose that opportunity of reflecting some lustre on their own names by appropriating this red-hot paragon. But for his quiet adoption and endorsation of all these compliments, we should have been inclined to think that the modesty of the honorable candidate was at least equal to his merits, seeing that The Southers Mail closes daily at 7 and 9 deathers and necessarily remove the darting the selection must necessarily removed the selection must necessarily removed the selection for the selection must necessarily removed the selection mu low. We do not insinuate that the creature was not actuated by a certain instinctive feeling of friendship. Possibly he had the recollection of numerous hours of dreary drivel consumed in the company of his friend; and we have nothing to say against bonds of alliance so formed and ratified. But the fact remains that the certificate system has become an intolerable nuisance, and ought at once to be put down. We have far greater respect for the man who puffs himself than for the man who puffs his neighbor. In the former case there is something of a sublime self-reliance—a noble trusting to unsupported valor. To enter the ring alone, without backers, is at least a proof of courage; and as to self-vaunting, have we not the authority of all the Homeric heroes. In the Iliad, no man butters another—each anoints himself, and that most liberally. Why, in the name of all that is candid, should a great man affect depreciation? Look to Moses and man affect depreciation? Look to Moses and Hyams. They don't own themselves inferior to any in the trade; on the contrary, they take up the Jew's-harp, and twang it in their own laudation. What would be the effect if Nibbs, in the Tuition. What would be the effect if Nibbs, in the coffee line, amounced himself in his advertisements as inferior to Husks, who deals in the same department? Why, he might shut up shop next term, for he would be playing into the hands of where genuine coffee can be obtained; and where genuine coffee can be obtained; and so where genuine coffee can be consecuted that the proper comparison of the plant of the comparison of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the proper comparison of the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genuine coffee can be obtained; and the plant of the genui recourse to one another's flasks for a little stimulant energy, but who broke down half-way, each attributing his failure to the exorbitant swallow of his courade. The fact was that they had shared quite fairly, but that either should have kept his own supply to himself. There is always danger in such copartnery. Laban tried to cheat Jacob, and Jacob cheated Laban. Jaffier sold Pierre, and Tresham divulged the Gunpowder Plot. On the whole, then, we maintain the doctrine that it is better, wiser, and more satisfactory for a man to puff himself, than to assign that task even to his most intimate friend. He cannot reasonably quarrel with his own self-laudation: reasonably quarrel with his own self-laudation; let the most sympathetic of his admirers write for him, and the odds are that he will consider the praise to be miserably stinted.

THE CHOCTAW INDIANS from the South, consisting of twenty-two men, eighteen females, and two little ones, arrived here on Tuesday morning. They are a part of a numerous nation of Indians formerly resident in southern Mississippi and southwestern Alabama, now occupying the southern part of the Indian territory. We do not know the object of their visit, but suppose, like everybody else, they came to see the "Crystal Palace Exhibition."—New York Mirror.
